: The Importance of Text Completion and Sentence Equivalence

In the realm of standardized testing, the Graduate Record Examination (GRE) looms large as a formidable hurdle for aspiring graduate students. Among its various sections, Text Completion (TC) and Sentence Equivalence (SE) emerge as influential components, accounting for a significant portion of the Verbal Reasoning score.

Text Completion challenges test-takers to fill in missing words in incomplete passages, demanding a robust vocabulary and keen understanding of context. Sentence Equivalence, in turn, presents sentences with one or more blanks and requires candidates to select the correct words that complete the thought in two equivalent ways. Mastering these sections is paramount for achieving a competitive score on the GRE.
