In her new book, _The New Parisienne: The Women & Ideas Shaping Paris_, author discusses the rise of the 'new Parisiennes' - the women who are shaping the city of Paris in new and exciting ways. From artists to entrepreneurs to activists, these women are breaking down barriers and creating a more vibrant and inclusive city.

Who are these 'new Parisiennes'? They are women from all walks of life, from all over the world. They are artists, entrepreneurs, activists, designers, writers, chefs, and more. They are women who are passionate about making a difference in their city, and they are using their creativity, intelligence, and determination to do just that. One of the most striking things about the 'new Parisiennes' is their diversity. They come from all different backgrounds, and they have all different kinds of experiences. But they all share a common goal: to make Paris a better place for everyone.

The 'new Parisiennes' are not afraid to challenge the status quo. They are speaking out against sexism, racism, and homophobia. They are fighting for climate justice and social justice. They are creating new opportunities for women and for all marginalized people.

The 'new Parisiennes' are making a real difference in Paris. They are making the city more vibrant, more inclusive, and more just. They are role models for women everywhere, and they are inspiring a new generation of leaders.

In _The New Parisienne_, author profiles some of the most influential 'new Parisiennes'. These women are making waves in their respective fields, and they are all contributing to the city's vibrant culture and community.

Here are just a few of the 'new Parisiennes' featured in the book:

- Agnès Varda, a pioneering filmmaker who has been making films for over 60 years. Her films often explore themes of feminism, social justice, and the human condition.
- Zahia Ziouani, a former prostitute who has become a vocal advocate for the rights of sex workers. She is the founder of the association "Le Nid" which provides support to sex workers and their children.
- Rokhaya Diallo, a journalist and activist who writes and speaks out about racism and sexism. She is the founder of the website "Les Indivisibles" which promotes diversity and inclusion in French society.

- Sarah Ourahmoune, a boxer who won a gold medal at the 2016
 Olympics. She is the first French woman to win an Olympic gold medal in boxing.
- Fatma Bengema, a chef who is known for her innovative and delicious cuisine. She is the owner of the restaurant "Dar Mima" which serves traditional Moroccan dishes with a modern twist.

These are just a few of the many 'new Parisiennes' who are making a difference in the city. They are all inspiring women who are breaking down barriers and creating a more just and equitable Paris for everyone.

If you are interested in learning more about the 'new Parisiennes', I highly recommend reading _The New Parisienne_. It is a fascinating and inspiring book that will give you a new perspective on the City of Love.
