The Aesop Fable: The Peacock and the Crane

Once upon a time, in a vibrant meadow, there lived a resplendent Peacock, adorned with an array of iridescent feathers. He strutted about, his tail feathers fanned out in a breathtaking display of colors, seeking admiration and praise. In stark contrast, there lived a humble Crane, its plumage a modest gray, who spent its days gracefully wading in the nearby stream.

As the sun began its descent, casting a golden hue over the meadow, misfortune struck the prideful Peacock. One by one, his magnificent feathers began to fall out, leaving him bare and ashamed. Destitute and stripped of his former glory, the Peacock wandered aimlessly until he came across the gentle Crane.

With compassion and understanding, the Crane shared its own feathers with the fallen Peacock, allowing him to regain his dignity and confidence. The Peacock, humbled by his experience, realized the folly of his arrogance and learned to appreciate the true beauty that lay within.
